Violetta and Allendorf. A OSE HORSE NOVEL .- Violetta started convulsively, and turned her tear-drenched gleaming with wild uncertainty.

"Violetta!"

"Allandorf!" And the beautiful girl sank from excess of joy, upon his noble heart, throbbing with pure, holy, delicious love of other days. Allandorf bent tenderly over her, and bathed her pure, white temples with the gushing tears of deep; though subdued joy. While doing this Violetta's father, Rid Van Short, was seen approaching the lovers with a flail, Allandorf saw the aged, patriarch, and with one mighty leap cleared the bannisters and ushed down stairs. But Van Short was not to be thus done. He put after the flying Allandorf, and just as he was turning the orner of the red barn, gave him a lift with the fail that placed him on the "other side of Jordon." Violetta, driven to distraction; aw herself upon the grass, and for a long eur, was deaf to every consolation. (To be continued.)-N. Y. Dutchman.

Schastopol--Its Position and

Strength. The following description of this stronghold of Russia is from the London Times, and will no doubt be interesting to our readers : Sebastopol, the famous stronghold of the Russiane in the Black sca is one of the most modern creations in the rapidly growing empire of the Czar, its site until 1786 having been occupied by nothing more pre-tenting than a miserable village of Tarter huts, named Akhties. The splendid natural advantages of its harbor for a first rate naval port, however, attracted the keen attention of Catharine II., and in 1780 the first stone of the new fortress and arsenal was laid, and from that period it has rapidly increased in strength and importance Sebastopol is situated on the western coast of the peninsula of the Crimea, in an amphitheatre to the south of the harbor, extending along a point of land which separates the Bay Yujnaia Bukhta, which forms the port from Artillery bay, a small indentation on the other side.
